Data protection specialists discussed matters related to the European Union data protection reform

17 Feb 2015

In the lead-up to January 2015, the Estonian Data Protection Inspectorate invited Estonian data protection specialists to the Parliament’s conference hall to discuss matters related to the European Union (EU) data protection reform, as well as the application of personal data protection in the development of information technology and the media. Presentations were given by Marju Lauristin, Member of the European Parliament, and Merili Oja, the Estonian Data Protection Inspectorate’s Director General.

The presentations dealt with the implementation problems in EU data protection law, the revision of data protection law and the development of the digital economy, the changing role of the press in society, and the future’s digital world. The main themes included the limits of national laws, the role of the press in society, and the development of my data.

The presentation was given by Marju Lauristin, Member of the European Parliament, who defines the European Data Protection Regulation (EU-DPR) as a legal regulation that determines the legal status of personal data in the EU and all the data protection rules, including registration, collection, processing, and supervision of data protection.
